

A guide to Permitted Work

April 2017

The information in this factsheet is correct at the date of publication. However, the Government has announced a number of reforms that will affect welfare benefits over time.

Please get back in touch if you are reading this some months after the publication date, in case it has been updated.

Background

Permitted Work allows people to try out working whilst still getting their incapacity related benefit. You can do Permitted Work while you are on the following benefits (but you do need to be aware of the Permitted Work rules as outlined in this guide):

- Employment and Support Allowance (ESA) or
- Incapacity Benefit (IB) or
- Severe Disablement Allowance or
- Income Support because of incapacity for work or
- Housing Benefit with a disability premium.

You do not need to get permission from your doctor but it may be a good idea to keep your GP informed about any work that you are doing.

If you are getting ESA, IB or Severe Disablement Allowance, your benefits will not be affected by your earnings as long as they are below the earnings limit.

If you get Housing Benefit whilst claiming one of these benefits your earnings from Permitted Work will be disregarded and will not affect your housing benefit.

If you get Council Tax Support you will need to talk to your local authority about the effects of doing Permitted Work and whether it will affect the amount of council tax support that you get.

Earnings from Permitted Work will affect your Income Support. If you are getting a disability premium with your income support, you can keep £20 of your earnings before your income support is affected.

If you don't get the disability premium, you can keep the first £5 before your Income Support is affected if you are single and couples can keep £10 before their benefit is affected.

Permitted Work rules

If you receive Incapacity Benefit, Severe Disablement Allowance or Income Support, ESA you can do work that meets the following criteria.

- Lower level Permitted Work is work of less than 16 hours per week and you can only earn up to £20 per week. You can do this work indefinitely.
- Higher level Permitted Work is work of less than 16 hours a week, on average, and you can earn up to £120.00 a week.

You may be able to do Supported Permitted Work (see below) and earn up to £120.00 a week for as long as you are receiving Incapacity Benefit, Severe Disablement Allowance or Income Support.

Supported Permitted Work is work that is supervised by someone employed by a public or local authority or a voluntary organisation whose job it is to find work for a disabled person. It can also be carried out as part of a treatment programme under medical supervision whilst you are in hospital or when you are a regular outpatient of a hospital.

The support and supervision must come from an external organisation and not from the management structure found in the workplace. The support must be provided on an ongoing and regular basis.

It includes work in the community or in a sheltered workshop. It also includes work under medical supervision as part of a hospital treatment programme.

You may be able to do Supported Permitted Work and earn up to £115.50 a week for as long as you are receiving Incapacity Benefit, Severe Disablement Allowance or Income Support.

Exempt claimants

Claimants in receipt of Incapacity Benefit, Severe Disablement Allowance or Income Support who are exempt from the Personal Capability Assessment (PCA) can work for an unlimited period, providing it is for less than 16 hours a week and earnings do not exceed £120.00 a week.

If you get Disability Living Allowance high rate care you are exempt.

If you are not sure whether you are exempt we would suggest that you write to the Department of Work and Pensions and ask them if you are exempt. There are very specific categories of people who are exempt from the Personal Capability Assessment. If you are exempt you should not have to fill in the IB50 form or attend medicals.

This exemption does not apply to people in receipt of ESA.

Permitted Work if you are migrated to ESA

If you are migrated to ESA from Incapacity Benefit, Severe Disablement Allowance or Income Support you can continue with the Permitted Work you were doing.

Extra employment support

If you need extra employment support because you are disabled and want to try some work, your local Jobcentre Plus office can put you in touch with one of their Disability Employment Advisers. If you are already involved in Jobcentre Plus interviews you may wish to discuss this with your adviser.

If you are an ESA claimant interested in Permitted Work you could discuss this with your personal adviser and check that the work you want to do is allowed under the Permitted Work rules.

Things to consider before starting permitted work

You do not need to get permission from the Job center to do Permitted Work but starting work is a change of circumstance and so you need to tell them about it as soon as you start work or even before you begin.

You need to ensure that the work you are doing fits into the Permitted Work categories.

You will also need to tell your local council if you are in receipt of Housing Benefit or Council Tax Support.

It may be useful to keep a diary detailing any problems that arise in the course of the work that that you are doing, eg. if you are not always well enough to attend or if you have to work flexible hours. This may be useful you're your benefits are next assessed.

Current benefits and Permitted Work

Taking part in Permitted Work should not lead to the DWP looking at your entitlement to benefit again. However, next time your entitlement to benefit is assessed they could take into account the work that you do and they could perceive that by starting work your condition has improved.

You will need to make it clear if there are limitations and problems that you experience whilst doing the Permitted Work. You may only be able to do very part time and flexible work for example. We would advise anyone considering Permitted Work to get advice from a Welfare Rights Adviser before starting work.
